

It will pay the farmers to see these machines before placing their orders, as there is no machine on the market as well adapted to their needs as The Milwaukee. We have the only solid frame harvester on the market and the only machine that raises and lowers from the seat, and the only concave steel bull-wheel, and the only truck that goes on without bolts.

Just received, full line
Delker Vehicles - 1900<sup>a</sup> style. Call and see them, you will like them.
Don't buy until you see them. They are the best on the market.

The remedy of ducks for the profit that can be made from them has not proven a success in this part of the country, especially among the farmers, and the old saying that "ducks will eat their heads off" has been verified many times.

Of course there are some breeders who make money out of ducks and the way they do it is by experimenting with the different kinds of feed and other items of expense, in order to ascertain which is the cheapest and most profitable to feed, and by so doing they are enabled each succeeding year to reduce the cost of raising and this of course increases the profit.

The average breeder or farmer will feed whatever kind of feed he may have on hand and think he is saving money by so doing, for he considers it an extra expense to buy other kinds of feed instead of feeding what he already has.

For young ducks I find that the best and cheapest feed is stale bread soaked in milk. I have also used bran and shorts moistened with milk, but I find the bread to be the cheapest.

After they are a few weeks old I then feed bran, table scraps, etc., but always cook it into a sort of mush. They are given plenty of green feed and vegetables and grit, and fresh water is kept before them all the time. I make a liberal use of corn-meal and find it cheap and very fattening.

All in all I have made some money on ducks but I haven't got the expense so reduced as to do as well as the large eastern breeders.
